WASHINGTONVILLE LOCAL GLEANINGS

Geo. McClun of Island was Youngstown Wednesday.

Both Sunday schools are practicing for Christmas entertainments.
Miss Anna Holland of Sebring was with her mother here over Sunday. James Skillcorn of Youngstown spent Sunday at the Cottage notel. Mrs. S. C. Wilson and daughter Epha spent Saturday in Youngstown Robert Dawson of Salem spent Sun-day with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Baird. Miss Freda Paisley and Jennie Maxwell were in Youngstown Wednesday. day of the year, Saturday, December Then two more shopping days until Christmas. Harvey Crook and wife with Elmer Warner and family attended the funeral of Mrs. Frank Crook in Alliance Sunday afternoon. M. G. Huffman and David Klingensmith of Green township have been selected as petit jurors for this term of court at Youngstown. Clinord Paisley, working in Youngshas been home several days on account of sickness. He is gradually getting over a severe cold. August Mathey had his mining tools sent to Newhouse, on the P. L. & W. road near Lisbon, and will start work in one of the mines there Monday. Herbert Smedley was summoned to Salem on Sunday on account of the death of his niece with pleurisy, leaving a husband and an infant child. J. N. Paisley, clerk, and John S. Davis, treasurer, of the board of education were in Lisbon Wednesday checking up their accounts with the county auditor.

It has always been my good fortune to live in towns that were building new school houses. I was in Carrollton in 1868, when their sub-districts were consolidated and a union school completed I located in San Jose, Califorina, where a state Normal school uilding was located. I then moved to New Harrisburg, Carroll county, Ohio, where a new school house was built and a section of school land was sold. I then located in Dell Roy and voted for a new school building there. tonville and voted for the new school building here. Last month I was in Carroliton, where their old school building had been condemned (by request, I suppose) and I voted for a new $50,000 building there. And on new $50,000 building there. And on my way here they were voting upon a $100,000 high school building in Salem, but failed to carry, because four buildings the size of the Wash-ingtonville school would serve a bet-ter purpose in Salem than one costly high school—and they knew it.

John Weikart was in Lisbon Wed

The Lutheran ladies served a good supper Saturday night, and from the sales of their bazaar and chicken pie they realized $90 plus. The supper was satisfactory and so were the receipts.

J. D. Woods came in from Aurora on Tuesday to see after his pension papers under the new law. "Moody" put in full time in the 104th O. V. I. and is deserving of more than he gets from his Uncle Sam.

The Sunday schools of this village are preparing Christmas entertainments, and the store windows are being decorated with holiday goods. X-mas has come to be a business proposition as well as a church event.

There is talk here of the Carrollton rubber works moving to Columbiana. The plant has a large capacity, but for some reason has not been working fuli the past year. By having better railroad facilities at Columbiana, may be an inducement for the change.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Blackburn and Mr. Robert Dawson of Salem road, in company with David Baird and famly, were entertained by Mrs. Isabella Dixon Saturday evening. As is the custom, the talk was of their old home in Scotland.

Master Loron Taylor has been housed up the past week with asthma, and amuses himself by making machinery for his wireless telegraph outfit, with which he communicates with the boys at Mt. Union college. Loron's sick room resembles a wizard's work shop. Mike Holland went to Sharon, Pa., Wednesday, to put in a few days with different telegraph stations around that section. The closing down of Fairview mine is taken as a practical joke by many who have been keeping tab upon its history for the past few years. The "Kanucks" may not want the No. 3 vain of coal, or may want to "freeze out" the miners of this country, but we are not to be "drowned out" in

The Erie railroad company has re cently placed cautionary signals along their right of way through this vil "Rail Road Crossing lage, reading Danger." With but one mail train a day, and that one running behind the four furnaces in the basement, will schedule, it is laughable to read these precautions. Better run their old lo comotives into the junk heap and send a few new ones to this branch or else give their right of way to Peter McCave for his gasoline motor

James Street, a native of Lanca shire, England, and a pioneer coal miner of Washingtonville, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. D. W. Bry an, in Salem, Sunday evening, aged bellion Mr. Street served in the Sec ond Pennsylvania Cavalry. For many years he resided in the house jus east of the Cottage hotel, and after wards located at Millville, where he was well known as a debater in lit erary societies.

Mrs. A. J. Callahan died of an internal tumor at her home in Salem early Tuesday morning, aged 65 years Her maiden name was Mary Hoffman the eldest daughter of John and Catharine (Koons) Hoffman, both deceased and late of Washingtonville, Ohio She is survived by her husband and son, Lawrence Callahan, and daugh ter, Mrs. Charles King, all of Salem Also a sister, Mrs. J. C. Fitzsimmon of Washingtonville and three half brothers, as follows: Oscar Hoffman and William Hoffman of Cleveland and Joseph Hoffman of Indianapolis Another half brother, L. E. Hoffman, lost his life a few weeks ago when his automobile slid off a narrow nountain road in Virginia. Funeral services for Mrs. Callahan were con-ducted from her late home at No. 38 Maple street in Salem at 1:30 this Thursday) afternoon.

"That young man is bound to heard from," said the Booster. "Thats right," replied the Know er. "I've been fistening to his cloth for several months."

Banner of Dec. 5 says: The following sad message, written on a postal card, was received ed Friday by A. Metzler, of this place, from his sister, Mrs. S. P. Yoder, of Denbeigh, Va., under date of Nov. 27. Mr. Shenk is a son of Bishop J. M. Shenk, of Elida, Ohio, and his wife (Amanda) is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Yoder and a niece of Mr

Metzler: "Dear Brother-Something very sad occurred here. Yesterday morning at 6 o'clock Levi Shenk's discovered their home was burning. The first thing, Amanda ran up stairs to get the children who were in bed yet. She grabbed the boy but could not get to Mabel any more. While she ran through the fire on the way down her clothes caught fire and burned her shoulders, neck, face, head and right hand so bad that she had to be taken to the hospital. Her face was all blisters and her eyes swelled shut. The little boy she carried got one hand badly burned and his hair singed. Levi just came in and put out the flames on her or she would have burned up. Sweet little Mabel's body was found with head and limbs burn ed off. John Lehman's, who lived in the same house and had just came back from a trip to Rockinglam coun-ty, to her folks, the evening before, were burned to death, all but John. They had two children. Both of them badly burned. The funeral will be to-morrow, Thanksgiving day. All the clothes they got out they had on their backs, and not much also. They and burned very rapidly. We are in the midst of Bible Conference but it is spoiled now. Remember us in our bereavement. Mary." Later word from Denbeigh states that Mrs. Shenk will probably recover, but it is doubtful if she is ever able to see again, her sight having been destroyed by the burns. A BIG GRANGE MEET

Dublin Grange One of the Live Or ganizations of Mahoning

County. As stated last week, a largely at-tended meeting of Dublin Grange was held on the evening of Dec. 3. The program was an especially pleasing one. Following are some of the papers, poems and songs presented by members of the order:

The Kind of a Man I Expect to Marry You usually hear it said, "Odd old maid school teachers." Now that doesn't mean Miss Flickinger and Miss Lulu Hake, but it does mean me. hadn't thought of the getting married subject till Brother Williamson gave me the subject and I had no man in view. I began to think about it and decided my last hope was to take advantage of leap year but then again I wondered where to go to find a man. They gave me a little more freedom by saying the kind of a man I expect to marry instead of saying the man I expect to marry. I gave up my leap year proposition because I didn't know where to go or what to say. So this is my plan. will start now and look for the man to answer to this description and in 1916, the next leap year, if I have him I will come to the Dublin grange and give you a paper on the man I married. Now that is if I find him before he finds me.

He must be about 5 feet, 9 inches and good looking. A minister told me once I should marry a man with dark hair and eyes. He said he shouldn't be a minister or a doctor because I had no use for him. So guess he will have to be a farmer. He must be a jolly good fellow like Brother Chubb. A farmer, I believe in or near Canfield where we may be near and have the benefits of both natural and artificial gas; also the accommodation which the flyer on the Erie Ry. afford. He must be a member of the Dublin grange or become a member, have good crops and raise large pumpkins to put in the display at the Hallowe'en celebrations-and enough to procure my own license by that time-I will take advantage leap year next time it comes Bidding you all good bye for four years I say good night. As the Grange goes marching on Chorus-Glory, glory, Halleluiah. Glory, glory, Halleluiah, Glory, giory, Halleluiah,

As the grange goes marching on And then there's Tommy Stratford Who lives down east somewhere, He's sort of meek and lowly But he'll fill the Overseer's chair And what he lacks in ginger

His wife has got her share As the Grange goes marching on Our Lecturer came from Goshen That good old Bible land. He came up here among us And joined old Dublin's band

His programme's rich and spicy. We'll answer to a man. As the Grange goes marching on C. E. Misner's at the desk, Who is our worthy scribe He keeps a perfect record, thought in vain, And then I tried to think again, To see if I an essay could find, To suit your most fastidious mind. I do not ask for a girl with an eye, Bright as a star in the azure sky But just a pretty little wife To help to bear the battles of life.

would not expect an angel of bliss To be wrapped up in this particular miss; But one that is happy, good and glad at the Chicago International That will make you feel happy when show, you are sad.

Just like the one so oft you meet,

As you go walking down the street,

With her radiant face wreathed with a smile, That you can see for half a mile. Just a good, happy sensible wife, To share in the sunshine and shad ows of life.

Now I am not a poet like Byron or Moore So I'll not try to write much more. Now if there is any here tonight, Who you all think will be just right Just one word more I have to say, Just make it known without delay. Composed by Hugh R. Russell, very simple matter but I presume our worthy Lecturer means right here in Carfield. Were I a woman-what a field! Am I to be a married woman, a grass widow or an old maid. Bro. Williamson does not designate, so naturally you say take your choice and so I will. Now I propose to be an old maid and we hope that our suggestions and plans may prove

I would so build my house that to all outward appearances it would resemble a modern house but practically it could be made an impregnable fortress instead of using building paper I would use armor plate. I would have one up stairs room to be used only in case of high water. I would keep several dogs, a lot of cats and a parrot that would swear only when I told him to. I would heat the house with hot water in the winter and cold water in the summer time. I would have an alarm clock for my sleeping room, the alarm connecting by electric wire with the cooking stove so that the fire would be automatically kindled. Then I would have an arrangement for my clothes something after the plan used in fire depratments for holding the harness-this I would have so arranged that when I stepped on a platform beneath, the clothing would drop on right and in a giffy I am ready for work. Oh, yes, I wanted to tell you about my washing ma-chine. It is a long box affair and has three compartments. The clothes are put in at one end and rubbed: then by means of interlocking gates on the same principle as those used in a canal, the clothes are changed to the second compartment and from there on to the blue water in the third. The wringer is at the end of the machine and the clothes line enters the room at the edge of a rolling door and the clothes are hung said. I want him to own a farm and run out of doers on this line without leaving the room. This machine-the churn-the cream separator, coffee grinder, bread mixer, several fly swatters, lemon squeezer and all the near neighbors are run by a hot air machine. Behind the kitchen door a shotgun, two pistols and the rolling pin. A medicine case containing such indispensibles as go to church. Trusting I will find bolic acid, camphor, smelling salts, a him before 1916—then being just old pair of pinchers for pulling a mosquito's probossis and a button hook for removing foreign substance from the eye. In the work table drawer strainer to remove bacteria from milk, a sheet of sand paper for toning off over-brown bread and a hypodermic syringe for putting in flavoring while pastries are baking. I would have a striking clock that would knock the neighbors cat off the yard fence and a dentist's chair to sit in evenings after the work is all done and sleep without danger of injuring the rubber in my neck. Fancy me there now. C. J. Misner.
